

Why hire an intern?

An internship is mutually beneficial: the employer provides a learning experience, and the student provides necessary office, project, or departmental support. An internship program provides employers with direct access to a pool of qualified candidates. Hiring an intern can help you meet the needs of peak periods or special projects. In addition, you can use the internship period to assess a candidate's long term potential with your organization.

Interns are dedicated and motivated to show the employer what they have to offer, wanting to impress you with their skills, work ethic and talent. Interns can provide a fresh perspective about your organization's challenges, leading to new ideas and creative solutions. They can bring diversity into your workplace and can energize your workforce. Student interns bring a wide variety of skills and abilities to your organization.
